nated by a large majority. The fight for places on the council ticket was also spirited one, and the personnel of that body will be very materially changed; many of the old members going out of office.

Although considerable bitterness was indicated, the affair was orderly in every respect, not a single arrest being made. The spect, not a single arrest being made. The only event out of the ordinary occurred this morning, when the front door of ex-Mayor Henry Strauss' residence, on King street, was found draped in black. Mr. Strauss had been a warm supporter of Mr. Thompson. It is stated that the ex-mayor has offered a reward of $50 for the apprehension of the responsible parties.

Sipple was named for magistrate. Verdict for the Railroad.

It was 11:30 o'clock last night before an agreement was reached by the jury sitting in the circuit court to consider the points of fact involved in the case between the city council and the Washington, Alexandria and Mt. Vernon railroad. The verdict was then announced and was in favor of the city on the first issue and for the respondent on the other four points.

In substance the first issue was as to whether the ordinance, set forth in the petition, directing the Washington, Alexandria and Mt. Vernon railway to remove the rails now in use on King street between Royal and Fairfax streets, and to substitute rails of a new pattern was duly ness. tute rails of a new pattern, was duly passed, approved and published; and whether certain conditions stipulated in section 33 of the city charter had been complied with. The points of the issues decided for the company were as to whether the rails in company were as to whether the rails in use are an obstruction to traffic; whether they are of approved pattern; whether the new rails would be necessary to the pro-posed improvement of King street, and whether the rails were of approved pat-tern when laid, and if laid with the knowledge and approval of the city authorities.

This verdict does not conclude the case, as the points of fact alone were considered. Saturday morning next Judge Nicol will hear the case argued from a legal standpoint, and will probably render his decision that afternoon

PERMIT TAKEN FROM HIM.

Jim Fiorello Prohibited From Exhibiting His Monkey.

Jim Florello, with his faithful monkey 'Jose," and his hand organ, was a caller at police headquarters yesterday. Attorney Moss, who accompanied the Italian, wanted to know why his permit to play his organ on the street had been taken from him. As near as the musician could tell the story he was deprived of his permit on 6th street. He declared he had done nothing wrong, and the taking away of his paper, he said, meant the taking away of his means of obtaining a livelihood. A few days ago Jim was arrested by a policeman for allowing his monkey to play on the sidewalks and causing an alleged obstruction. Prosecuting Attorney Pugh declined to present the case in court. Major Sylvester informed the attorney and his of playing on some of the business streets, among them F street, 15th street between Pennsylvania and New York avenues and Pennsylvania avenue

Pennsylvania avenue.

Those found on these streets will be deprived of their permits. This condition of affairs was brought about because of a complaint made by H. C. Hunter. He wanted to know why the officer at 11th and F streets stopped a blind man from playing a low-toned musted instruments. a low-toned musical instrument and per-mitted an organ grinder, with a monkey, to grind out common songs.

It is the intention of the authorities to rid these business thoroughfares not only of hand organs, but also of mendicants who go about in the crowds of pedestrians begging. Complaints against these people have been made a number of times.

Most of the people around Fort White know of these dangerous places and always avoid going on a road where these tales are. Jennings was a newcomer, however, and not understanding or knowing of these matters, undertook to make a short cut across the road on an old path. It was a moonlight night. While old path. It was a moonlight night. While driving along the road he suddenly came upon this white, open space, which looked so much like driven snow. "Isn't that beautiful," he involuntarily exclaimed to his companion.

on, but in vain. He kept sinking and sinking, and in a few minutes barely its head was showing, while the carriage had settled down to nearly the seat.

Jennings perceived that only death awaited them there, and made a flying leap to the firm ground. He tell short and splashed into the quicksand phosphate, sinking almost his whole length. With rare good luck his hand grasped a palmetto root at the edge, and by frantic sindeavor he managed to pull himself to on land. Struggling to his feet, he rapidly pulled down a loose, straggling gropevine that was hanging on an oak near by, urged to rapid work by stragging grapevine that was hanging on an oak near by, urged to rapid work by the piercing screams of the frightened girl in the wagon, who was standing on the seat while the seething mass of quicksand was around her ankles. Jennings whipped out a grapevine, and, whirling it to her, she caught at it and missed it, and fell forward into the quicksand partly.

Finally the grapevine fell across her open hand, and she clutched at it instinctively, almost fainting from her terrible position. Clutching it in a death grasp, Jennings

Indianapolis Journal.

A fact leaked out a few days ago which indicates the bearing some seemingly harmless bills passed by a general assembly have on large interests. One of these bills, which was passed at the last session without any discussion, prohibited the building of any railway lines through any graveyard. Little was known of its purposes but at that time of the session bills for the pensioning of civil war veterans and their widows and such other benevolent measures were being passed more or less regularly along with patriotic resolutions, and what little was said about the bill was thrown out in such a way as to appeal to the sentiment of the solons. In an effort to prevent the desecration of graves, however, the legislators took a step the importance of which they never realized, and the facts alleged in the case follow: Ever since the Chicago and West Michigan railway was built its western terminal was at New Buffalo, where it formed a

CRAIN-O BRINGS RELIEF

Junction with the Michigan Central, over the tracks of which it entered Chicago. As the business of the road developed, it was found that the trackage charges made inroads into the income of the company to the point where it was deemed desirable to do away with them. Accordingly, the heads of the road decided to build their own line into Chicago, and through their news the into Chicago, and through their agents be and to Chicago, and through their agents began to purchase rights of way wherever desired. Most of the proposed route ran through the sand dunes along the upper end of Lake and Porter counties, and here the Knickerbocker Ice Company of Chicago owns vast tracts of land trom which it takes sand for its lice houses and for it takes sand for its ice houses and for building purposes in Chicago. The new route of the railway will cut through their most valuable sand deposits, and the Knickerbocker company steadily refused to sell.
Only a few weeks before the opening of

Only a few weeks before the opening of the legislature the railway company announced that it proposed to bring condemnation proceedings to secure possession of the land, and then was hatched the bill which has rendered it impossible for the railway to complete its line. First of all, the company secured a collection of what are known in medical colleges as "stiffs," to the number of forty or fifty, and these were buried at intervals, properly marked, all over the tract. The next step taken was to prepare the graveyard bill, which was introduced by Representative Patterson, who was innocent of the motives back of it, and passed without discussion by both branches of the general assembly, under the supposition on the part of the members that it was designed to thwart the attempt of some cold-blooded railway corporation to desecrate some old-established burying ground around which clustered historical associations. The graveyard is still there, and the people in the northern part of the state are wondering what move the Chicago and West Michigan will next take in its endeavor to reach Chicago.
